PROGRAM: Gould Hagler, Civil War historian presented today. Mr. Hagler spoke about the story of a Confederate monument in Florence, AL. There were lots of bank failures due to the Panic of 1893. Plans to build the monument were lost due to the loss of money. Daughters of the Confederacy had to use many different methods to raise the money. The campaign to build the monument started in the 1880's, and it was finally completed in August 1902. It took help from a former major general and the governor of Tennessee to assist in the fundraising efforts. The dedication of the statue was a huge event involving a parade, and all the shops and railroads were shutdown for the day. 47 Civil War veterans attended.

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS: Johnny Self presided. Dick Coffee fined Johnny Self the last time he was sergeant, so Dick Coffee received a fine. CD Denson did not wear socks. Michael Johnston refused to smell CD Denson's feet when the sergeant ordered him to. Johnny Self described an injury to Dr. Alex Casey, and Dr. Casey told Mr. Self to "put tape on it". Joseph Habshey cannot pronounce names.
